Our Aspiration

This is important to us:

Authenticity

We at "Alte Resi" believe in the traditional form of culinary art. Whether jam, tomato sauce, lentils or chutney: We produce as much as possible on site. Our sugar reduced cakes and gateaus are also naturally self-made – just like during the times of Mrs. "Alte Resi".

Seasonality

Our dining menus are diverse just like the seasons and follow a regional footprint.

Freshness

We attach great importance to meals being made with fresh ingredients and avoid using processed food.

Regionality

Wherever possible we try to obtain our products from regional suppliers.

Sustainability

We only use glass or steel drinking straws. Our to-go coffee cups are bio-degradable and available without plastic lids. Many of our suppliers also contribute to species and environmental protection.

How the Café-Bar got its name ...

What many might not be aware of: There is a connection between pharmacies (Apothecaries=„Apotheken“) and bars.

For many centuries "Apotheken" had the unique privilege of selling wine and other alcoholic beverages.

In the 16th century there was a simple solution to avoid binge drinking: Wine was only allowed to be sold as medicine in medical stores. Just like for venoms, the officials assigned the task of controlling the abuse of alcohol to the pharmacists – this is for example documented in an order from 1526 and 1537.

It has been a long tradition of "Apotheken" to serve wine. Towards the end of the 18th century, it was common for pharmacists to run a public drinking saloon alongside of their "Apotheke" where wine, brandy and also beer was sold.

Pure wine – without the addition of medicine – was considered as a remedy for patients and was recommended for recovery. ... Essentially wine was used as base for medicine, medical wines and tinctures ...

Renowned "Apotheken" kept besides alcoholic beverages, made from grapes, also Jamaican bay-rum, made from sugar cane, batavia-arrac, made from rice starch and sugar palm, grain brandy, coffee and eggnog, herb liqueur, aniseed liquor and punch essence.

Nearly every "Apotheke" produced its own herb liqueur for which the pharmacists used their specific knowledge about domestic and foreign natural drugs to prepare alcohol-based botanical extracts...

The Café-Bar „Alte Resi“ was established in the end of 2019, prior to which the pharmacy "Residenzapotheke" was occupying the ground floor rooms from 1980 to 2010.

What was more obvious than naming the Café-Bar, in which exclusive cocktails, fine whisky and many other liquors are served, „Alte Residenzapotheke“ - or shortly nicknamed "Alte Resi"?

About the history of the building

The house under preservation order originally contained two separate buildings: One to the south oriented front building and one north-facing back building ascending to the former hippodrome. At an unknown point of time both buildings were put under construction work to eventually form one unit.

The exact year of foundation of the "Schrauthaus" is not documented. The regional authorities for monument preservation date the foundation to the 18th century and describe it as a „Building for residential and commercial use, three floor, hipped roof with gable lucarne, triangular pediment and ornamented pilaster belt.“

In the 1870s the house was owned by family Schraut who ran a printing company there from 1909 till 1977. After carrying out extensive renovation work, the heirs of family Schraut (now under the surname Bruder) used the ground floor rooms as a pharmacy ("Apotheke").

Only since the end of 2017 the building is no longer occupied by family Schraut–Bruder.

The building at Johann-Sebastian-Bach-Platz 11/13 has been renovated, modernised and changed multiple times. The current layout of the ground floor is the result of an overall refurbishment by the owner company 7Asbero GbR during the years 2018 and 2019. The three business partners were inspired by the history of the house and considered for the interior design the historical character of the building with it being used as a pharmacy for many years.

In the Café-Bar you find antique apothecary furniture and inventory from former days that create the special atmosphere in the „Alte Resi“.
